WORKMAN MAY RECOVER IS IN LOCAL HOSPITAL

Fred Walker, of Bellefonte, Sustained Serious Injuries.

WORKING AT FOUNDRY

Fred Walker, a well known young man of near Bellefonte, employed by Benjamin Bradley, was very painfully injured when he fell at least twenty feet from the top of a scaffold while helping in the erection of an addition to the plant of the Sutton—Abramsen Engineering Company.

Walker was carrying a board and in some manner lost his balance, pitching forward and landing on the railroad siding. Fellow workmen picked him up and tried to make him comfortable until a physician and the hospital ambulance was secured.

At the hospital his condition could not be definitely determined for some time, it being feared that the injuries were even more serious than they first seemed to be. The hospital yesterday reported that his recovery is now expected.

In addition to bruises and small cuts, his right wrist is fractured and he was considerably shocked but it is almost certain now that there were no serious internal injuries.

Eminhizer Family Reunion.

The Eminhizer family had a delightful reunion over the Fourth and fifth of July. Including the parents, Rev. and Mrs. G. W. Eminhizer, of Coleville, there were 35 present on the Fourth when a big supper was the feature of the celebration. The seven children present were Mrs. Harry Thompson, of Haupts Place, her husband and their baby son; Harry Eminhizer, with his wife and two children, of Coleville; William, wife and two children, of Houserville; Charles, of Dayton, Ky.; George C., wife and five children, of Newport, Ky., Mrs. Harry Spicer and daughter, of Scottdale; James Ray, of Beech Bottom, W. Va., wife and son. There were also six great-grandchildren and Mr. and Mrs. Chester Lafferty and daughter Martha, as guests. On the fifth, a party of 25, in three autoes, motored to the Shuey hunting camp in the Seven mountains and enjoyed a delightful dinner.

Business Men's Picnic.

The fourth annual picnic of the Associated Business Men of Bellefonte will be held at Hecla Park on Thursday, August 16th. This statement alone indicates a joyous event to be anticipated. It means the one big day that every man and his family have an invitation to enjoy an outing. The committee in charge of affairs have already begun real work to make this year's program one that will be a credit to the organization which has come to mean so much in our community life. The committee on publicity has promised to keep us posted on the doings and our readers may expect information just as fast as the program is outlined. It is now time to set this day aside as the big outing for your summer and plan to be with the Associated Business Men and their friends at Hecla Park on August 16th.

Car and Culvert Damaged.

A Chevrolet touring car and the west end of the concrete culvert abutment on the south side of the state highway, near the Thomas Beaver farm, were both damaged, on Saturday evening, more especially the auto, when it was driven into the abutment after the driver had been blinded by lights of an approaching car. Seymour Confer was a passenger and was cut and bruised but not seriously injured. We did not learn the name of the owner and driver, who escaped with only slight injuries.

An Old Time Printer Here.

W. H. Bone and family, of Ottawa, Canada, are guests this week at the home of Mr. Bone's daughter, Mrs. S. S. Aplin, and family, in Bellefonte. Mr. Bone is well advanced in years but has as much pep as many younger men. He has been a printer in many establishments, some in New York state, but mostly in Canada, and he speaks very interestingly of some of his experiences.

Ransacked Brant House Rooms.

Some party ransacked rooms in the Brant House, it is alleged, on Tuesday evening, securing some valuable articles. An arrest is expected as authorities have been investigating.

Cows Killed by Lightning.

Four fine milk cows were killed on the farm of John Reish, south of Bellefonte, when struck by lightning during a storm on the 3rd.

BOYS HAVING FINE TIME

Large Number Enjoy Life at A. G. Morris Camp on Spruce Creek.

Reports from the A. G. Morris camp on Spruce Creek indicate that the boys are enjoying themselves immensely. The young fellows who are taking advantage of the Y. M. C. A. outing have not had time to even think of becoming home-sick. There were quite a number of visitors on last Sunday. These included parents of some of the boys. In several instances the parents experienced something of a shock. They rather feared that their young sons would be homesick and that the saying of goodbyes when evening came would be attended with heartaches and tears. The boys fooled them. They were having too much fun in camp to become homesick, they said.

Visitors included Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Beaver and family, Mrs. George R. Meek and children, Joseph Herman, Mrs. William S. Katz, Harry Ruhl, Mr. and Mrs. Willis Bottorf, Mrs. Farree and family, and numerous others. Mrs. Farree made arrangements for Walter to camp with the boys during the last two weeks.

There are over forty boys in camp at present. They include Alan Katz, Wm. Curry, Peter Meek, Kenneth Fromm, Ross Aplin, Fred Kurtz, David Locke, Donald Conrad, Cameron Heverley, Floyd Ammerman, Joseph Gingery, Louis Troupe, William Harvey, Elmer Garbrick, John Emel, Richard Mabus, Jack Yeager, Edward Zorn, James Potter 2nd. Jocob Bottorf, Austin Kellerman, Henry Bullock, Charles Bullock, Donald Best, James Beaver, Ned Ray, William Ruhl, Philip McGovern, Jack Miller, Wells Daggett, Reynolds Shope, Ross Beatty, William Curtin, all of Bellefonte; Thomas Turner, Julian; John Gilliland and John Kessinger, of State College; Jack Clark, of Blanchard; Walter Farree and Robert Reed, of Iowa City; George Parker, New Brunswick, N. J.; James Lindsay, Pittsburgh.

A Delightful Fourth.

Good weather presented an opportunity for a delightful Fourth of July in Centre County and it prevailed. The big celebrations—by the Logans at Hecla Park, the Moravian Park near Snow Shoe, State College, Port Matilda and Blanchard, each had a crowd. The Logans had perhaps the largest crowd and cleared enough money to fully pay for their recently purchased auto truck. They had total receipts of almost $1,500, with an approximate amount clear of about $700. Rain insurance, costing about $80 was not needed. The Centre Hall baseball nine surprised everybody by defeating Bellefonte 7 to 2 in the afternoon game, the field being too wet for a morning game. At Snow Shoe, two games were played between Snow Shoe and the Lock Haven Eagles, the latter nine winning both.

Two Cars Damaged.

A Ford coupe, driven by Samuel Budinger, of Snow Shoe, a salesman of the Beatty Motor company, in Bellefonte, and a roadster driven by Sherman Lutz, were considerably damaged on Sunday evening in a collision at the intersection of Lamb and Spring streets. Mr. Budinger was coming down the steep grade from Linn street and Mr. Lutz was driving east on Lamb street, a steep upgrade. Neither were insured.

New Brick Plant for Monument.

The old fire brick plant at Monument is being razed and will be replaced by a new and modern plant. The mine operations are being continued to supply other plants of the Harbison—Walker refractories. The new plant will be much larger and it is reported that about 40 new houses will be erected to provide homes for workmen, an additional number being anticipated when the new plant is operated.

Foster Family Reunion.

Mr. and Mrs. Phil Foster, of State College, enjoyed a family reunion the latter part of June, their son Harold, and wife, with the latter's mother, Mrs. C. H. Boyer, of Chicago, and two daughters, Mrs. John Crandell, of New York, and Mrs. Stanley Furst, of Sharon, being home on summer vacations at the same time.

NOTED AUTHOR AND WIFE GIVEN LOCAL INTEREST

Mark Twain Executor in Mortgage Assignment Recorded Here.

VISITED IN THE COUNTY

That world famous and noted author, whose writings have been so frequently enjoyed by many of our readers—none other than Mark Twain himself—was a former visitor to parts of Centre County in his life time as would be indicated by the records in the office of Recorder Wm. H. Brown at the Court House.

Mark Twain's name in private life was Sam'l. L. Clemens. His wife was Olivia Langdon. It is in this form that the assignment of a mortgage was signed by them and recorded in miscellaneous book D, page 597, where any of our readers might peruse it at will. One of the striking parts is the clearness with which it was written, everything in those days—back in the 60's being written by pen and ink (some of the good writers of that period handled the pen with remarkable adeptness) instead of by typewriting machines as in these modern and more to be desired days.

Following is the assignment of the mortgage as written in Centre county Deed Book D, miscellaneous, page 597:

Assignment J Langdon to J. Whitcomb:

Know all men by these presents, that we Theodore W. Crane, John D. F. Slee, Charles J. Langdon, Olivia Langdon and Sam'l. L. Clemens, executors of the last will and testament of Jarvis Langdon, late of the city of Elmira, State of New York, for and in consideration of the sum of $1 to us in hand paid by Judah Whitcomb, of the village of Horse Heads, State of New York, at and before the ensealing and delivery of these presents, the receipt whereof is hereby acknowledged, have reassigned and set over and by these presents do reassign and set over unto the said Judah Whitcomb, his heirs and assigns, a mortgage made and executed by the "Philipsburg Coal and Iron Company to the said Judah Whitcomb, dated the fifth day of August, in the year of Our Lord, one thousand eight hundred and sixty five, for the sum of Fifty Thousand dollars, which said mortgage is recorded in Mortgage book F, page 6, in the office for recording of deeds in and for the county of Centre, Penn'a. and was assigned and set over by the said Judah Whitcomb to the said Jarvie Langdon, the seventh day of November, in the year of Our Lord, one thousand eight hundred and sixty-six, the said Mortgage being own all that certain piece, parcel or tract of land, situated in the township of Rush, county of Centre and state of Pennsylvania, containing three thousand and four hundred and fourteen acres more or less, being the property of the Philipsburg Coal and Iron Company, with the appurtenances therein mentioned and described, together with the rights, members and appurtenances thereunto belonging and all the estate, right, title and interest of the said Jarvis Langdon therein, to have and to hold all and singular the premises hereby assigned and set over or mentioned or intended to be, unto the said Judah Whitcomb, his heirs and assigns forever, subject nevertheless, to the right and equity, of redemption of the said Philipsburg Coal and Iron Company, in witness whereunto we have hereunto set our hands and seals this day of in the year of Our Lord one thousand eight hundred and seventy-two.

FAWN'S LEGS CUT OFF BY FARMER'S MOWER

Little Creature Week Old; Killed and Sent to Philipsburg.

SEVERAL PERSONS FINED

A deer a week old, a very beautiful fawn, was the victim of an unusual accident when three of its legs were cut off by a mowing machine last Friday. The fawn was killed and was examined in Bellefonte, where it was brought by Mr. Mosier, by a number of persons.

Mr. Mosier said, "The farmer, Milliken Yearick, resides about a mile this side of Potters Mills. He was cutting grass and it is thought the fawn was lying in the field and leaped to its feet as the knives of the mower neared its body, so that its legs were cut off near the hoofs. I was called and found the fawn still living when I reached the scene. I killed it and sent it to the taxidermist at Philipsburg, who wanted to mount it."

During the past week Game Protector Thomas Mosier has been quite active and placed several persons under arrest for violating the game and dog laws, the persons caught in each instance paying fines and costs.

Nester Heckman, of Spring Mills was arraigned before Justice Jamison, of that place, and paid a fine of $20 and costs on a charge of using a throw net in Penn's creek.

Clifford Wilson, of Millheim, for fishing without a license, was taken before Justice John Musser, of that place, and paid a fine of $25 and costs.

Dogs have been chasing deer in several sections and some of the dog owners were notified and each paid a fine of $10 and costs.

Witnessed Sad Accident.

Lynn Love and wife, his mother, Mrs. John Love, Misses Sarah and Catherine Love, Mrs. Jack Galaida and Miss Mary Derstine, motored to Hollidaysburg on Sunday to visit the latter's son, Lee, who has been a patient in the County hospital there for the past two years. Returning home via Altoona the touring party witnessed an accident that so saddened the remaining part of the journey that it seemed like a spell of quietness was cast upon them. A street car had stopped just within the city limits and there were many cars. Drivers obeyed regulations and were parked on either side of the street car. As the cars started to move, a Chevrolet driven by a man and also occupied by his wife and babe, was noticed to dash forward and collided headon with a big touring car. The impact threw the babe through the windshield and it was instantly killed. The mother's neck was broken and she died later in the Altoona hospital. The husband and father received painful injuries, including several fractures, but will likely recover. It is thought the man stepped on the accelerator instead of the brake pedal and thus caused the accident.

Stepping Stone Damaged Auto.

The stepping stone in front of the Frank Deitrick property on Bishop St. on Sunday evening caused an automobile, bearing a Virginia license plate, to be slightly damaged when the car went against it. The occupants of the car were not injured and it was driven along on its journey after an investigation, showing that no serious damage had resulted. Carl Clemo, a Finlander, and Harry Skart, both said to reside west of Bellefonte and alleged employes of the American Lime and Stone Co., were arrested for driving the car while intoxicated. Clemo was arraigned before Burgess W. Harrison Walker and was released on Monday on payment of costs. Skart was given a hearing before Justice J. M. Keichline and held for court under $500 bail, which he was unable to furnish.

Cars Collided at Zion.

In a collision at Zion on Saturday evening a Ford touring car, driven by John Yearick, who resides on a farm near Zion, had the left front wheel torn away. The occupants of the car, Mr. Yearick's family, escaped injury. The other car was a Maxwell, driven by a Mr. Breon, and was damaged only slightly.

District S. S. Picnic.

Bellefonte District Sunday School Asso., United Brethren church, will enjoy an outing at Hecla Park on Saturday, July 21st. There will be two base ball games as well as other amusements. It is hoped the weather will warrant a large attendance.

HAVE FOUR PRISONERS

Three Convicts in Jail for Trial in Court.

Four of the eight prisoners who escaped recently from Rockview have been caught.

Robert Hill, of Punxsutawney, caught when he went to visit his home, entered a plea of guilty at a special session of court held by Judge Henry Quigley on Monday of last week. He had little to say excepting that he had been very foolish. Hill's original sentence was from 3 to 4 years for breaking and entering. According to the former law Judge Quigley would have had no sentence to make excepting a similar term to be served at the completion of the original. Under a new Act, recently becoming law, the Judge is given some discretion in exercising his judgment and may temper his sentence to suit what seems to best justify the occasion. In Hill's case, he was given a sentence of 2 to 4 years to be served at completion of the present sentence. Thus, by good behaviour, the new law made it possible for Judge Quigley to fix the sentence so that Hill can manage to serve 1 year less than would have been necessary. However, if Hill should act contrary to the opinion formed of him, he will find the maximum period of 4 years facing him.

The other prisoners caught and in jail, who prefer to face trial, are as follows:

Arthur Price, received from Philadelphia County, to serve 3 to 5 years for robbery.

Clair Jamison, from Jefferson County, serving 3 to 4 years for breaking and entering.

Both Jamison and Price were caught in New Castle.

Ed Fiddell, caught in Chicago. He was serving 3 to 5 years on being convicted in Cambria County for larceny.

Those still missing are Herman Eagler, from Clearfield County, convicted of aggravated assault and battery with intent to murder and who was serving 4 to 12 years. He is looked upon by many as a ring-leader in causing disturbance at Rockview and through the diligent efforts being used in an attempt to recapture him, it is expected he will not remain at liberty long. He is generally described as a big rough buck who does not hesitate at anything and one who frequently displayed an unruly disposition.

Jesse Neff, from Allegheny County, weighs 185 pounds, is 23 years old, and is 5 ft., 9 inches in height.

Thomas Provance, from Clinton County, 160 pounds, 23 years old and 5 ft., 10 inches.

F. L. Carson, who walked away with Fiddell. He is 39 years old, 5 ft., 10 inches and weighs 183 pounds.

Bus and Truck Collided.

One of Emerick's busses, the first coming to Bellefonte from Milesburg on the morning of circus day, was damaged and a truck, also from the Emerick garage, was considerably damaged. The bus was driven by Elmer Rockey and was filled, a number of silk mill employes being passengers. They were more or less shaken up and bruised, but nobody hurt. Howard Drye was driving the truck and escaped injury. The collision occurred near the entrance to the show grounds, at a sharp curve on the state highway. There were a number of cars on the road and the circus men were busily engaged in unloading so that the collision made quite little excitement. It required considerable effort to pry the bus and truck apart, after which they were taken to the garage for repairs.

Concert by Orphans' Band.

The famous Boys' band from the Loysville Orphans' Home will give a delightful concert on the Diamond in Bellefonte on Sunday evening at 8:30. The band, which has appeared in Bellefonte several times, is composed of 40 boys ranging in age from 10 to 16 years, under the direction of Prof. Harry C. Stenger. The Loysville Orphans' Home is a Lutheran institution caring for over 300 boys and girls. This Sunday evening concert is being managed by St. John's Lutheran church. The program will be a varied one suitable for a Sunday evening engagement. A free will offering will be lifted and will be given entirely to the band.

Ice Truck Damaged.

One of the big delivery trucks of George Kelley, loaded with ice, went over the embankment at the Mallory blacksmith shop in Bellefonte on Wednesday morning. The ice slid from the truck and had to be loaded onto another truck, which was quickly done, facilitating prompt delivery. One wheel on the truck that went over the embankment was smashed. Lynn Love was driving the truck but at the time was delivering ice to a customer, the truck starting backward over the concrete road when the brakes failed to hold on the steep grade.

PARENTS OF FIVE HELD ON BOOTLEGGING CHARGE

Father in Jail; Mother Permitted to Remain Home.

FOUND STILL AND BOOZE

Charged with making and selling booze containing a large percentage of alcohol, Mr. and Mrs. John Rodzynski, of Rush Township, are being held for a hearing in the next session of Centre County court. A still and half-gallon of liquor, said to be a very strong mixture, were confiscated when found as the home was searched.

The Rodzynskis have five children and this caused the officers to be more lenient with the mother, who was permitted to remain home to care for them, although bail in the sum of $500 was imposed on her for her appearance in court. The father was placed in jail in default of bail in the sum of $1,000.

GREATEST METHODIST OUTING

Many Will Go to Lakemont Park on July 26th.

For the 20th time the Methodists and their friends of Central Pennsylvania will meet at beautiful Lakemont Park, Altoona, on July 26. This annual picnic has been held for a quarter of a century and is without question the largest summer assemblage held under Methodist auspices in the state of Pennsylvania.

Its continued popularity and success is due to several causes. It is central. Lakemont Park is easily accessible. It is conveniently reached north, east, south and west by good highways and by various branches of the Pennsylvania Railroad. Lakemont Park is the most beautiful and best equipped park in Central Pennsylvania. A uniformly high order of program has been presented each year. Some of the greatest leaders of the denomination by sermon and lecture have provided information and inspiration. This year will be no exception.

The following program for this year's gathering has already been announced: Morning worship: Sermon by Rev. John H. Daugherty, D. D., of Williamsport; afternoon rally: Address by Rev. Daniel L. Marsh, D. D., of Pittsburgh; evening lecture: Rev. L. C. Murdock, D. D., of Philadelphia. Music of a high order is promised by the Fifth Ave. quartette and by the chorus of the Women's League of Voters of Altoona. Lakemont Park with its ample accommodations and a program of such merit will again attract thousands of Methodists and their friends to Altoona on July 26.

Traffic Halted on High Street.

Traffic was halted on High St. on Monday afternoon for about 10 minutes when the big delivery truck of the C. Y. Wagner mill and a Ford roadster of Harvey P. Schaeffer collided in front of the Brouse grocery store. Nelson Billett was driving the truck and going toward Water St. The Bellefonte Fuel & Supply Co's black team was being driven up the street, hitched to a load of coal, and Hoy Royer, who was driving Mr. Schaeffer's car, attempted to drive by. Cars were parked at both sides of the street, which is being repaired, and it seemed too narrow for all the traffic. Mr. Billet feared an accident, but was unable to stop the truck quickly enough, so that the bumper on it struck the left fender of the Ford, damaging it considerably and causing a tire to be torn from the left front wheel. The Ford was also pushed toward the left horse in the Fuel & Supply Co's team, being just in front of the front wheel of the wagon and within a foot of striking the horse's leg when stopped. Fortunately, nobody was injured and only the Ford car was damaged. It was towed to the Beatty garage for repairs.

Racers Caused Auto Wreck.

Two drivers, racing their machines side by side on the concrete road near Wallace White's at Axe Mann caused a disastrous wreck last evening. They are alleged to have been speeding at least forty miles an hour, coming toward Bellefonte, when P. Newman, of Punxsutawney, accompanied by his daughter, Miss Ruth, in a big Studebaker six touring car, noticed their predicament as they saw the racers nearing them. Mr. Newman had to act quickly. Facing a fearful collision, driving to the right into the creek or to the left up an embankment, he swerved his car to the embankment. This left the racers by but his car upset and was wrecked. Fortunately, he and his daughter escaped injury. The [illegible] of the racers were not secured bu[illegible] nesses bear out Mr. Newman's st[illegible]

KEELER, AT 80, GOES TO WORK

After fourteen years of enforced idleness because of ill health, J. H. Keeler, widely-known Maryland citizen, has gained forty pounds at the age of eighty years and gone back to work every day. Mr. Keeler, who resides at 3706 Thirty-Second St., Mt. Ranier, Md., gives entire credit for his extraordinary rehabilitation to Tanlac.

"My stomach was in such terrible condition I could hardly digest a thing," says Mr. Keeler. "It would swell to nearly twice its normal size and I would have frightful pains through my stomach and back. I felt so weak, dizzy and miserable work was out of the question. In fact, my friends gave me up on three or four occasions.

"Five months ago I began taking Tanlac and improved from the very first bottle. I now eat anything on the table, have gained forty pounds, and am back at work every day. Actually, I feel like a boy again. It would be ungrateful of me not to praise Tanlac."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Accept no substitute. Over 37 million bottles sold.

MRS. LINDQUIST TELLS WOMEN OF MIDDLE AGE

What Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Did for Her

Kansas City, Mo.—"I was left in a very serious condition after childbirth and no one thought I could ever be any better. Then came the 'Change of Life' and I was not prepared for what I had to suffer. I had to go to bed at times to be perfectly quiet as I could not even stoop down to pick anything from the floor. I did not suffer any pain, but I was decidedly nervous and could not sleep. For nearly two years I was this way, and the doctor was frank enough to tell me that he could do no more for me. Shortly after this I happened to see in a newspaper an advertisement of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. In a few days the medicine was in the house and I had begun its use and I took it regularly until I was well. I recommend the Vegetable Compound to others when I have the opportunity."—Mrs. MAY LINDQUIST, 2814 Independence Ave., Kansas City, Mo.

ASHES OF ROSES

By KITTY PARSONS

(©, 1923, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

ALL her life long Joy had never been so still before. She lay on her couch with closed eyes, trying to think. Joy was not used to reclining, but the doctor had insited upon it—her ultimate recovery would be a question of long, tedious months of lying on her back.

There was a knock at the door and Malcolm came in. Joy had been waiting for him all day, literally counting the minutes till he came.

"I've just heard of your accident, Joy. It's a crime. Will you be here long?"

"For months, the doctor says."

"How dreadful! What shall I do without you after all these weeks of playing around together? No more dancing or dining or walking with you this spring—it makes me sick!"

Joy thought of the last three wonderful months and a chill struck her heart. How happy they had been, dancing, laughing, joking! They had always been merry and gay—never serious for a moment. Malcolm hated to be serious when he could be amused. Life had been one glad song to them both.

"But it isn't over," she almost pleaded. "You'll come to see me and talk to me often, won't you?"

"Of course," he assured her. "But it won't be the same." Joy thought he looked ill at ease in a sick-room, not at all like himself. Somehow Malcolm seemed to belong to life and health and happiness; trouble and suffering had little place in his life. But of course he was a genius.

"Do you remember, a week ago tonight, how we rode down town on top of the bus, with the snow falling all over us? And how we explored the queer little streets and alleys? What fun we had!"

"And the hot dogs!"

"Oh, yes, the hot dogs! And the coffee!"

"And the dance hall—don't forget that. How they almost put us out because I held you too close."

"Yes, yes, I remember." Joy caught her breath sharply. She knew nothing could make her forget that night—or any other night when she had been with him. She longed to tell him so but she couldn't.

A few minutes later Malcolm pleaded a business engagement and hurried away. That was Wednesday. He promised to return on Friday. After he had gone Joy thought of all the things he had not said.

Thursday about the same time there was another knock on the door and Joy was thrilled with expectancy. He could not wait! But it was David and not Malcolm who opened the door.

David dropped on his knees beside her couch and took her hand in his.

"Poor little Joy," his voice caressed her. "How hard it must be for you to lie here so quietly day after day, when you are always so full of life and gladness. I can't bear to think of it."

David's only thought was for her, but Joy hardly heard him. She was longing for Friday to come. David hurried on:

"Marry me now and I'll take care of you always. I'll cancel my passage Saturday for China and get work here if you want me to do it—it's not too late if you need me."

Joy wanted the comfort of his protecting arms, but she knew she could not rest there. The laughing face of Malcolm stood between them. So she sent David away.

Friday her heart sang with happiness as she waited for Malcolm. She arranged her hair in a most becoming fashion and wore her most bewitching negligee. And she burned incense in the tall vase on the mantel. Her illness and enforced idleness no longer mattered—nothing in the world mattered except that it was spring and Malcolm would soon be there! Over and over her heart sang the same joyous song.

At 5 the maid brought her a large box of roses, with a line scribbled on the card: "So sorry—unexpectedly delayed. Will phone. M. S." Outside the window a robin sang and sang and sang, and Joy wondered how anyone could be so cheerful. She had quite forgotten that it was spring.

Saturday she thrilled anew at the thought of his coming. David's tenderness was long since forgotten—David wasn't a poet, so, of course, he was different. All day long she waited, her ear attuned, sensitive to every ring of the bell. Once a delivery boy came and again the letter carrier, but there was no word from Malcolm.

When Joy had almost given up hope, the maid brought her his telegram. For some moments she held it in her hand, fear clutching at her heart. He must be ill, perhaps dying. Certainly something terrible had happened to him. At last she gathered strength to tear it open. There were only a few words, staring sharply at her in the cold, clear type of the telegraph company:

"Leaving today for three years' travel in China. Sorry not to see you before sailing. Best wishes for your speedy recovery. Will write from other side.—Malcolm."

For a long time Joy lay perfectly still, staring at the roses beside her couch. And she noticed that one of the loveliest of them all had already begun to droop.

Commends Forestry Methods of France

Charles Lathrop Pack, president of the American Tree association, who has been sending millions of young trees to France to help reforest the devastated battle areas, commends to Americans the methods of the French as told in a report received by the association. He says the operations in the forest of Roentgen near Aix la Chapelle and in the forest near Cleves are conducted along the most scientific lines.

"We find," says Mr. Pack, "that the French and the Belgians have cut something like four million board feet, with the coming growth fully in mind.

"This is much different from the slashing and girdling done by the Germans during the war in their retreats. In this French method there is a great lesson for the United States. With France there are always more trees coming.

"In the United States there are millions of acres of idle land once covered with growing trees. They could be that way today had scientific forestry been practiced in this country during the last forty years. There should be a forest crop in this country just as there are other kinds of crops.

"Our idle land was not made idle by an invading army with cannon, but an invading army with axes. But we are in much the same situation as France, although from different causes. The thing to do now is to reforest these idle acres, for our newspapers and our factories must have forest products 'f. o. b. the warehouse door.'"

Hungarian Invents Far-Seeing Machine

The telehor, the machine which sees at great distances, is the invention of Denes Mihaly, twenty-nine years of age, the chief engineer of the Budapest telephone works and head of several other mechanical organizations. Mihaly, a well-known student of high frequency electrical currents, has no less than 62 inventions on the market, including the speaking kinematograph, a new system of colored kinematograph, a plastical kinematograph, and many automobile and wireless inventions.

The telehor is made of two separate instruments, the receiver and the reproducer. The connection of the two instruments may be effected either through a wire, wire connection or wireless. Every photograph, landscape, figure, handwriting or any object which is placed before the objective of the receiver is seen under less than 1-10 of a second on the screen of the reproducer. The principle of the telehor is similar to that of the photo-machine of Professor Korn. The latter, however, makes necessary an ordinary photo proceeding.

With the telehor it is a question of transferring moving pictures, similar to those which appear in an ordinary camera. Every time the objective is opened, the electro-light transformer is effected in the telehor, also, with a selenium cell which changes the different light elements of the picture to similar electro-light currents in the instrument. The obstacle to effecting this up to now has been in the nature of the selenium, which acted very slowly so that the cell was ineffective. The solution of the problem was made possible in the telehor with the invention of an exceedingly small selenium cell, which is capable of registering 100,000 light changes per second.

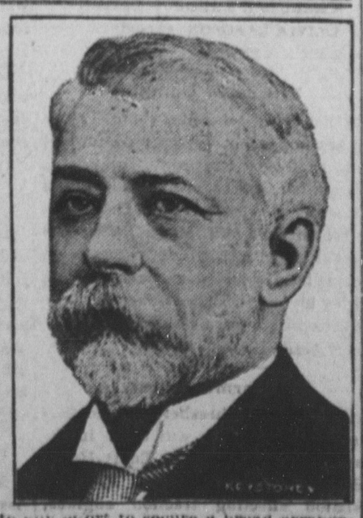
Horace Towner Has Ungrateful Job

Only a little while ago Horace M. Towner, former congressman from Iowa, was appointed by the President to be the governor of Porto Rico, to succeed E. Mont Reily. Scarcely had he assumed his new duties than he found himself confronted with an opposition as determined as that which had succeeded in having Reily ousted from the position.

Governor Towner is charged with ignoring the Republican party, which Governor Reily favored in his appointments, and with turning virtually all offices over to Unionists, the dominant party of the island, whose appeals to Washington brought the change in administration.

President Harding probably will be carried into the whirlwind of Porto Rican politics when he visits San Juan after his trip to Alaska. Reports to Secretary Weeks show continued friction. He considers it virtually impossible to name an executive who will please both factions. The secretary denies Governor Towner has ignored the Republicans completely. Pleas for the removal of Towner are expected when Mr. Harding reaches the island.

Canadian Favors Reciprocity With U. S.



Back in 1911 Hon. W. S. Fielding of Canada negotiated with President Taft for a treaty of reciprocity between the United States and Canada. It failed because eastern Canada opposed it. Mr. Fielding is now finance minister, and recently he made another trip to Washington to revive the proposition. It is said in Ottawa his plan will have the support of a large majority in the new Canadian parliament. The farmers of the western provinces have increased their voting strength, and the Liberals stand with them on this proposition.

The Fielding proposal, made in the house of commons at Ottawa, is that President Harding reduce by 50 per cent the duties on cattle, wheat, flour, oats, barley, potatoes, onions, turnips, hay and fish. The Canadian government would then be authorized "to make such reductions of duties on similar articles imported into Canada from the United States." Preliminary to any effort to secure a broad arrangement which would call for the ratification of congress and the Canadian parliament, efforts will be directed to that action which the President is already empowered by congress to take under the Fordney-McCumber tariff.

3 YEARS WITHOUT WORD WINS WIFE A DIVORCE

Sat Opposite Husband Every Day at Luncheon, She Says—Cruel, Says Court.

London.—A wife who said that her husband had not spoken to her for three years and two months, although they sat opposite each other every day at their midday meal, was granted a decree nisi of divorce in the courts last week, the judge holding that this unusual conduct amounted to cruelty and desertion.

The wife, Mrs. Ada Diver, said she was married in 1899 and that she and her husband were quite happy until 1920, when she had a nervous breakdown and went to stay at her mother's house for a few weeks.

For twelve months after that they lived in the same house and had one meal, luncheon, together each day, but did not speak.

She left him, but returned in a short time, and though her husband then slept elsewhere, he still came home for luncheon and continued doing so until last week, though refusing to speak a word to his wife, the silence being maintained altogether for more than three years, she said.

Runaway Tricks Police; Thieves Get Diamonds

New York.—After frightening a horse to divert attention from themselves, two bandits recently smashed a window in the Rundback Jewelry store, 2232 Third avenue, fired a bullet at one of the proprietors and fled in a taxicab with a tray of diamonds valued at $40,000. The robbery happened shortly after 9 o'clock, when the streets of Harlem were filled with Saturday night shoppers.

The store has been robbed twice in the last year and, although the loss in each instance was not great, Patrolman John Lloyd of the East One Hundred and Twenty-sixth Street station has since kept a careful watch on the place. Just before the robbery, a horse hired from a livery stable at 345 East One Hundred and Third street bolted, and the policeman ran after it. A moment later came the crash of glass as the store window was smashed.

Persons who happened to be in the block between One Hundred and Twenty-first and One Hundred and Twenty-second street said they saw two young men leap from a taxicab at the curb just as the policeman raced after the horse.

One of them hurled a brick through the show window and the other quickly reached through, taking out one of several trays of gems. John Rundback, who owns the store with his mother and his brother, Edward, rushed to the doorway and one of the bandits fired at him, but the bullet went wild.

The two robbers then jumped into the taxicab, which was a few feet away, and drove out of sight before Policeman Lloyd had finished calming the frightened horse two blocks distant. No one could be found who could account for the animal running away, but the police believe some one in league with the bandits was responsible.

Disease Makes Her Talk Almost Continuously

Parsons, Kan.—Talking almost continuously since last Thanksgiving, and still going strong, is the unique record of Miss Mildred Spencer, twenty-year-old schoolma'am of this city.

Miss Spencer, while visiting her home in Baldwin for the Thanksgiving vacation, prattled incessantly of "cabbages and kings," but the family thought she was only overjoyed to return. But when she awakened her mother night after night to continue the talk-fest, the family became alarmed.

Several weeks ago the patient was brought to a local sanitarium, where physicians diagnosed her malady as "talking sickness."

Miss Spencer is widely read and has a wealth of material upon which to enlighten attendants. She rarely repeats herself.

A cure within a few weeks is promised by physicians.

Child Found Lunching on a Stick of Dynamite

Mrs. C. E. Brewer of Kansas City, Kan., was amazed to find her three-year-old daughter seated on the step of a rear porch complacently chewing on a half-pound stick of dynamite. She separated the baby from its "lunch" and called the police.

Other children, who had been playing in the yard, explained that the baby found the explosive in a bunch of wire. No ill effects followed the dynamite menu.

APPEALED TO MAN'S VANITY

Brightly Colored Beads, in Some Shape, Have Been Popular in All Ages and Countries.

Beads are one of the oldest witnesses to the vanity of mankind.

The oldest beads were simply stones with holes through them, which, owing to their bright color or peculiar shape, took the fancy of the finder, who threaded them on a strip of hide or fiber. Later, when we became more civilized, beads made of wood carved into fantastic shapes were in favor. Some beautiful examples of both kinds can be seen in the British museum.

Uncivilized races have a passion for stringing together various objects as beads. Human teeth, brightly colored insects, seeds and even whales' teeth, are worn in this way.

The word bead comes from "bede," the old English word for prayer. It has an interesting origin. In olden times, as a person repeated his prayers they were counted by ticking off one by one a string of small pierced balls which were threaded together, and in time these balls came to be called beads.

Safety First for Raymond.

When Raymond took his school report home to his father he was very angry, and scolded his small son for being at the bottom of the class.

Dr. Curtis H. Muncie of Brooklyn, N. It is known that the patient is none other than Don Jaime, second son of King Alfonso, who has been deaf since birth. Dr. Muncie also accepted invitations to demonstrate his new method of "manipulative surgery" or "reconstruction of the Eustachian tube" before leading medical associations in London, Paris and Glasgow. He uses no instruments in his treatments of the deaf.

So he rigged up an artificial limb and now Bossy stumps around quite handily on her peg leg.

KILLED THREE WOLVES

"Tame One" Attacked Boy Who Was Petting It.

Three wolves, chained and kept at the "zoo" of Col. Henry W. Shoemaker, at his pretty home at McElhattan, were killed by Mr. Shoemaker's orders after one had attacked Alfred Wagstaff, of New York city, a nephew of Col. Shoemaker.

The lad is fourteen years old and thought the wolves were safe. They had been showing evidences of being "tame" and permitted some folks to approach them. When Wagstaff went too close to one, however, it attacked him, knocked him down and bit him. His injuries are not considered serious but it is alleged the wolf might have killed the lad had it not been for the timely arrival of the care-taker, Jesse Philips.

STRICKEN ON BALL FIELD

Death Came to Native of Milesburg as He Hit Grounders.

Bernard A. Green, a native of Milesburg but for the past 24 years a highly esteemed resident of McKeesport, died on the evening of June 26th while practicing for a baseball game. The deceased was manager of the West Side M. E. Church team and had worked in his garden during the afternoon. At 6:15 he went to the ball field and was knocking grounders to a few members of the team in practicing for a Church League game. He was noticed to stagger as a ball was throwed to him and he fell, the ball bouncing over his head. Fellow players carried him to a bench and called a physician when first aid methods failed to revive him. The physician pronounced him dead, giving over exertion and intense heat as contributing causes.

The deceased was about 46 years old and was a son of Tobias Green, deceased formerly well known in Milesburg. He was engaged in the insurance business in McKeesport and took an active interest in church affairs. Surviving are his widow and two sons, John and Lyman Green, both at home; the former being a member of the same baseball team which was managed by the father and reaching the field a short time after the latter had been stricken. Two sisters and one brother: Mrs. David Jones and Mrs. Rhoda Brenkman, of Philadelphia, and John Green, of Connecticut, also survive.

Funeral services were held at West Side M. E. church in McKeesport on June 28 and the remains were shipped to Milesburg, burial being made in Curtin cemetery.

Out-of-town persons who attended the funeral were Mr. and Mrs. Curt C. Miller and son Blair, of Sharon; Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Miller, of North Side, Pittsburgh; Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Jordan and daughter Sara, Miss Anna Nicholson, Mrs. James Jordan and son James, of Carnegie.

Ludwig—Willard.

Harold Ludwig, of Lewistown, and Miss Frances Willard, of Bellefonte, were united in marriage by Rev. Wilson P. Ard, pastor of the Lutheran church, at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. D. I. Willard, on North Thomas St., on July 3: Miss Hazel Hurley, of Bellefonte, was brides-maid, and Ralph Ludwig, of State College, a brother of the groom, was best man. The bridal couple went to Pittsburgh on their honeymoon and returned to Lewistown this week, where they will reside. The groom has visited frequently in Bellefonte and is known among the younger set. He is employed in the offices of the Standard Steel Co. at Lewistown. The bride is one of our best known young women and has a host of friends who wish the couple many years of happiness. Out-of-town guests were: Mrs. George D. Whalley, of Homestead; Mrs. R. E. Kirk and daughter, of Grindstone, and Ralph Ludwig, of State College.

Landis—Wolfgang.

The wedding of Frederick M. Landis, a son of Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Landis, of Bellefonte, and Miss Bernice Wolfgang in the M. E. church in Lewistown, recently, was a big event in social circles in our neighbor town. Mr. Landis is an inspector employed by the Standard Steel Works, Burnham. His bride is an accomplished young woman and a graduate from the Lewistown High School, class of 1917. The out-of-town guests at the wedding included Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Landis, Mrs. W. H. Brouse and daughter, Carolyn, Mrs. Harold Bowman and daughter, Betty, of Bellefonte; Clare Kyler, of Altoona; and Mr. and Mrs. Roy Landis, of Tyrone. The bride and groom enjoyed a honeymoon in Ohio and spent the Fourth of July in Bellefonte, returning to Lewistown during the week-end where they are at home at 332 Shaw avenue. They have best wishes of many friends.

Stearns—Bottorf.

A pretty wedding was solemnized at the Lutheran parsonage in Lewisburg at 11:15 o'clock when Guy W. Stearns and Miss Mary E. Bottorf, well-known young folks of Lemont, were united in marriage. The bridal party included: Miss Elizabeth Ishler, Miss Inez Hartsock, Charles Parson and Charles Hood. Mr. Hood and Miss Ishler acted as attendants. A sumptuous wedding breakfast was served at the hotel at 11:45. The bride was attired in light blue silk and carried sweet peas. The entire party enjoyed the afternoon along the Susquehanna river and at twilight the bride and groom started on a honeymoon trip by moonlight while the others returned home. Their many friends extend to them their heartiest congratulations and best wishes.

REV. DR. EVANS TO LEAVE

Secures Pastorate of Big City Church in Larger Field.

Rev. Dr. David R. Evans, an active participant in church and civic affairs since he and his family came to Bellefonte to assume the pastorate of the Presbyterian church, has resigned and expects to leave here on August 19th.

The Evans family came here from Wellsboro about a year and a half ago. They have proven efficient and popular. The new field is so much larger and offers so much more in every way that they could ill afford to remain. Their many friends regret their being called to another section but are pleased with the progress made by Rev. Evans and his family.

The new field is at Kerney, near Newark, N. J. The city has a population of 30,000 and the church a membership of 700. The Evans will take a vacation from August 19th to September 1st, beginning work in the Kerney church at that time.

Discussed Coal at Smoker.

At a smoker in the Brockerhoff House on Monday evening 36 representative business men of Bellefonte gathered for a delightful discussion of the subject, "Coal." Among those present at the meeting were William G. Blanchard, president; P. W. Rainier, vice president in charge of operation; R. E. Allen, treasurer, Charles W. Kurtz, mining engineer of the firm, Blanchard and Company, of Pittsburgh; who operate the Blanchard—Zanesville Mining Company at Zanesville, Ohio; the Blanchard Fuel Company, of Pittsburgh, and the Blanchard—Moshannon Mining Company of the Keating—Karthaus district. Most of the discussion related to development of the latter property.

Two Hurt in Auto Accident.

Gilbert Boyer and Miss Sue Wellers were both injured when the latter was run down by an auto driven by Boyer, the car upsetting when it ran into a ditch near State College and pinning Boyer underneath, after he had hit Miss Wellers. The latter received severe lacerations of the scalp while Boyer was cut and bruised. Neither was seriously injured.

Enlarging Match Plant.

The Pennsylvania Match Company continues to be a very busy plant, one of the standbys in the industrial life of this section, and during the past week workmen have been tearing down one of the smaller storage rooms. It will be replaced by a very large storage section of a number of rooms, affording several time the present capacity.

Carnival Here Next Week.

The Majestic Shows, a carnival company using 15 cars and exhibiting in Altoona this week, is scheduled to come to Bellefonte for next week, according to orders received at the local P. R. R. freight station. It is said the company is a very attractive one with modern riding devices, including the very popular whip.

—and I'll Be Laid Up Several Weeks Longer

WHY, a brick fell from the third floor of a new building and connected with my head. In a hospital for a long time with a cracked skull, fever, delirious, and heaven knows what all.

But every month, regular as clockwork, along came a check for $200 from the ÆTNA. You see, my ÆTNA ACCIDENT POLICY calls for $50 weekly while totally disabled, $25 a week while partly out of commission, and also surgeon's fees or hospital bills. Makes it hard for me, eh? Man, I'm an optimist of the purest ray serene.

What did the policy cost? If I told you how little, you'd say I'm still raving. Come up tonight and I'll tell you. So long!

Most of the hay is in the barn. It was a light crop. This week will see most of the wheat in shock and by no means a bumber crop. Oats and barley seem well headed, but the straw is short. Corn is coming along, but not a full stand. The cherry crop is the best in years. Many bushels are going to waste because of a scarcity of pickers.

Ex-Sheriff W. Miles Walker is having his barn at Fairbrook re-roofed with corrugated iron. Gummo and Wieland have the job.

Witmer and Confer, of Bellefonte, were here bright and early Monday morning and installed an ABC electric washer at the Prof. Krout home in time to do this week's washing. Its a dandy.

REPORTS show a labor increase in sales of merchandise, which shows that the American people do not deny themselves what they want.

But reports also show a large increase and steady growth in savings bank deposits; a good sign.

Sensible people do not deny themselves proper comforts, but sensible people also desire to have an anchor to winward in the shape of a savings account in a good bank.

"RESOLVED, that the Associated Business Men of Bellefonte, approving the slogan 'GIVE OUR RAILROADS A CHANCE.' fully endorse the program of the railroads to provide Adequate Transportation service in 1923 and pledge full co-operation in the effort to anticipate the over-flow of business in the peak period by purchasing NOW, coal and other commodities, as far as practicable, that as a rule move in the fall and winter months."

We advise our friends to heed the above resolution that was passed at the last meeting of the Associated Business Men of Bellefonte and "GIVE OUR RAILROADS A CHANCE," thus profiting by the reduced price and quality of bituminous coal.

The population of Greenland, according to an official census completed by the Danish government, the results of which have just been made known, consisted of 274 Europeans, practically all Danes, and 14,081 natives, states the American consul at Copenhagen in a report to the Department of Commerce. The natives number 6,729 men and 7,352 women.

WILL ALLOW FAMILY CLAIMS

Class Heretofore Regarded as Unauthorized Now Permitted by U. S. Veterans' Bureau.

Consideration of a class of veterans' claims heretofore regarded as unauthorized will be permitted by the United States Veterans' bureau, according to word received by the American Legion.

A new ruling provides that claims which were made for family allowance after the veteran's discharge from the service can now be considered where the person to whom it was desired to make the allowance was subsequently brought by law within the permitted class of beneficiaries.

In the particular case submitted by the Veterans' bureau for decision, an attempt was made by an enlisted man to claim an allowance for his aunt, who, he showed, was absolutely dependent upon him for support. At that time the claim was disallowed because an aunt was not then, nor now, within the permitted class of family allowance beneficiaries. The aunt involved in this case, however, stood in loco parentis to the enlisted man.

Following the discharge of the enlisted man from the service, the first Sweet bill amended the war risk insurance act by enlarging the permitted class to whom allowances might be made to include "persons who have stood in loco parentis to a member of the military or naval forces at any time prior to his enlistment or induction for a period of not less than one year." This amendment was made retroactive in its force to October 6, 1917. The aunt in the case ruled upon held such status.

In view of this retroactive provision the comptroller general has ruled that a regulation of the Veterans' bureau requiring that application for family allowance must have been made while the enlisted man was still in the service to form a basis for a successful claim does not apply where a subsequently enacted law has given rights which could not have been claimed while the enlisted man was in service.

HOME FOR EX-SERVICE MEN

Wonderful Estate in Heart of New York Forest Preserve to Be Used as Sanitarium.

Free treatment will be afforded tubercular veterans in the Veterans' Mountain camp of the American Legion, a project sponsored by the ex-service men's organization in the Adirondack mountains of New York.

Here a 1,275-acre estate of a former well known millionaire has been secured in the heart of the New York forest preserve. The camp will not only be used as a sanitarium for tubercular and convalescent veterans but will eventually become a home for aged and indigent ex-service men.

The only requirement for admission will be an honorable discharge from the armed forces of the United States. Everything will be furnished to the war fighters, treatment, board, lodging, clothing, and pocket money. Veterans from any section of the country will be admitted, if it is proved they are in need.

The project was originated by the American Legion in New York as a portion of its hospitalization program. The Legionnaires of the state seek a fund of $2,500,000 to provide for the camp, and a campaign has been waged throughout the state to this end.

In speaking of the project, the committee in charge stated: "The camp is a tangible manifestation by the American Legion that it means to end the intolerable conditions under which thousands of veterans have been dragging along. The Legion means to provide the necessities these men have lacked and place their comrades beyond the reach of want. It hopes to awaken the nation to the reality of things, and is firm in its belief that once aroused, it will come forward, heart and hand, and aid them in this great work."

Among the honorary committee which is serving in assisting to raise the fund are former Ambassador James W. Gerard, Otto H. Kahn, David Belasco, Augustus Thomas, George W. Wickersham and others.

Memorial Erected.

A memorial has been erected by the University of Arkansas in honor of the students of that institution who gave their lives in the World war. A huge boulder of native limestone to which is attached a bronze plate bearing the names of the dead heroes serves as the memorial. American Legion members had charge of the dedicatory ceremonies.

Brought Out Ancient Autos.

Legionnaires in Santa Ana, Cal., recently held a most unique celebration in an "Automobile Resurrection day" which they staged. Derelict cars of every type were sought out and formed a parade through the city's streets. It is said that the vintage of some of the cars was so ancient that automobile manufacturers sought to purchase them as relics.

THORNTON FRIEND OF LEGION

Head of Canadian Railway System, Long in Army Service, Strong for Organization.

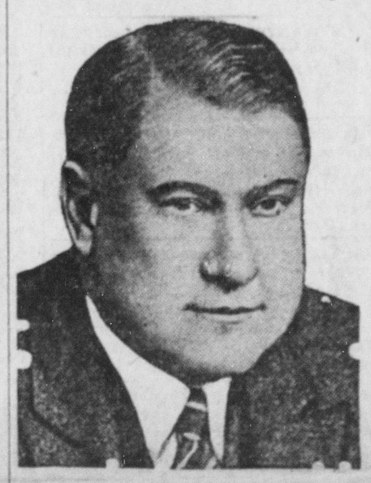
A Canadian by adoption, but formerly a citizen of the United States, Sir Henry Thornton, head of the great Canadian national railway system, shows his respect for American World war fighters on every occasion.

When members of the American Legion in Canada gathered to pay tribute to the honored World war dead of the nation, Sir Henry was the principal speaker, taking this opportunity to demonstrate his regard for the heroes of the land of his birth. The event was attended not only by American Legion members, but representatives of nearly every allied nation.

One of the best-known men in the Dominion of Canada, Sir Henry is heartily co-operating with the attempt of the American Legion to organize the veterans of the United States now in Canada into posts of the American Legion. A recent reorganization of the Legion in the Dominion has caused the inauguration of such a campaign.

Sir Henry was born in Logansport, Ind., in 1871. His early education was received at St. Paul's, Concord, N. H., and he later entered the University of Pennsylvania. Here he received a degree from the civil engineering department of the school in 1894, and almost immediately obtained employment with the Pennsylvania Railway company as a draughtsman. He held various important positions with the engineering department of this company and in 1911 became general superintendent of the Long Island railway, a subsidiary line of the Pennsylvania. In this capacity he had much to do with the development of the Long Island terminal and with the electrification of the Long Island railroad.

In April, 1914, he was called to England to become general manager of the Great Eastern railway. This railway was one of the most important military lines of communication during the war. In 1916 Mr. Thornton was named deputy director of inland water transportation, with the rank of colonel in the Royal Engineers. This department handled all inland water navigation in northern France, Egypt and Mesopotamia. He rose to the rank of major general, and was named inspector general of transportation in 1918. Following his acceptance of British naturalization in 1919, he was gazetted a knight commander of the Order of the British Empire. He has been awarded the American Distinguished Service Medal, the Order of Leopold from the Belgians, and the Legion of Honor from the French.



Sir Henry Thornton, K. C. B.

Call from Canada for Sir Henry's services came in November, 1922, when he was asked to go to the Dominion to the Canadian National Railway system as chairman of the board of directors and president of the company.

AIM TO TEACH PATRIOTISM

Several New Laws, Approved by American Legion, Passed by West Virginia Legislature.

Before any person can become a teacher in West Virginia schools, he or she must take an oath of allegiance to support the Constitution of the United States and the state of West Virginia. This is the text of a bill passed recently by the West Virginia legislature, as one of three measures sponsored by the American Legion, all of which have become statutes of the state.

The bill requiring the oath of allegiance is one of the ideas for carrying out plans for thorough Americanization put forward by the Legion and given strength by the support of the veterans' organization.

Another bill requires that the United States flag shall be flown over every schoolhouse in the state while schools are in session, except in inclement weather. The bill further provides that the flag, a regulation United States standard, shall be purchased by the school board from the building fund.

The third bill which received the support of the Legion calls for thorough training in the schools of the state in history of the United States, civics, and instruction in the constitutions of the nation and of the state. This bill was presented with the idea that thus would the principles of Americanism, the perpetuation of the ideals of the nation, and knowledge of the organization of the government become known to every student in the state.

Broker Contemplated Suicide When Crash Came, but Opened Refreshment Stand Instead.

This man slid to the bottom—he failed with a crash. What do you think of what he is doing with his failure?

New York.—Magazines have made fortunes by printing stories of success. Periodicals always yearn for successful-men stories, because the world has small use for a loser.

But you never hear about the men who got up and slid down, or the men who never got up at all, save as they happen to choose an unusual method of suicide or leave last notes that have human document qualities. So the fact that Roy H. MacMasters, once the head of the firm of R. H. MacMasters & Co., of 82 Broad street, went down and out left no mark on the sands of memory even among those who lost when his firm failed. He slid down—failed. And this is the story of his failure and what he did with it.

A little more than two years ago he was the head of a business that turned over millions a year, and his suite of offices resembled a portion of a hotel grand ballroom and cost more money to keep up each day than most men make in a year.

Today MacMasters is the head of another business that does exceedingly well if it grosses $10 a day.

Runs Hot Dog Stand.

He runs a hot dog stand and ice-cream parlor not a stone's throw from Jamaica Bay, and sells gum, tobacco, cigarettes, candy and extras.

Instead of tailored clothes, he wears a half-sleeve white shirt, open at the neck and a white apron, and when he's not frying a dog or making soda he takes the broom and flicks off the dirt from his doorsill.

"Of course, it's a come-down," he said, pinching a cigarette between fingers marked by experimental carpentry. "That's the usual remark, but, believe me, I was glad to get this. I'm making a living, got a place to sleep and now I'm beginning all over again. I work hard, but you have to work hard in this world to get along."

He sat down at the little round green table he painted himself in the little green-latticed arbor he made himself and pulled up a green wicker chair for the reporter. His sandy red hair was clipped short, his face bronzed and his smile was white-teethed and wholesome. "The going last winter was hard. I couldn't get a job—unless driving a truck, and I was considering that. When you're on the skids almost everybody is anxious to give you a push, and that's the way it was with me. Whenever I walked into an office and presented my card: 'Huh, MacMasters. That's the bucketeer. Nothing doing for him.'

"So I got fixed up with this. I do my own carpentering, and I potter around—it keeps me from thinking till I have to go to bed.

"I suppose you can't get away from your thoughts?"

He scrubbed out the fire on his cigarette on his shoe. "No, a man's got to think, and he always takes them with him."

"I suppose you've thought of a high dive from the bridge?"

He smiled, his wide-apart blue eyes crinkling. "Yes," he replied calmly. "I've thought of that. But when fate gives you a kick in the eye the best thing to do is take it, dig in and begin again. I'm only thirty-three and I'm getting back my health."

The $33,000 which was turned in as assets when the MacMasters firm failed was all the money he had, he said.

Everything Shipshape.

MacMasters is immensely proud of his cool green property, and as he was in the navy during the war, he appreciates neatness and keeps the place tidy.

He speaks of his troubles with a smile and a shrug, but can't understand his being hounded for being a failure. "They don't seem to want me to get ahead or have any peace," he said. "I'm going along here making something out of nothing, but I can't be let alone. These quiet fisherfolk near here don't know me, and I would as soon they didn't, so you can print my address or you needn't. Use your own judgment."

As the reporters were leaving they mentioned his failures and the others of the Consolidated Stock exchange. He was interested in the new failures, but wouldn't discuss the old.

"I can't say anything. I simply can't. All I can say has already been printed. Some day, maybe, I'll clear—" He stopped, shrugged, smiled, and with a hard grip shook good-by.

War "Mutiles" Are Cared For

France Pays Out Five Billion Francs Yearly to 1,500,000 Victims of Battle.

Paris.—"Where are France's mutilated and what has become of them since the end of the war?" This question, heard on all sides in Paris and coming particularly from Americans visiting the capital, has prompted an investigation which reveals that there are in France close on 1,500,000 ex-soldiers who have lost limbs in the war, become either partially or totally blind or are today suffering from shell shock.

For all these men the French government pays out a little more than 5,000,000,000 francs per year in pensions. A special ministry known as the ministry of pensions has had to be created to handle all these cases, while in every department of France a school for the re-education of all these victims of the war has been founded.

Exact figures of this country's mutilated soldiers is not known, for they vary continually, death claiming many men unable to survive the terrible wounds received in battle. It is estimated that on an average 30 die each month. No matter what degree of mutilation, every soldier who was given back to civilian life in any way permanently injured receives a pension, and pensions range from a few hundred francs to 9,000 francs for men having lost both legs or both arms or having become totally blind.

Avoid Publicity.

Mutilated pollus are not seen in any great numbers in France for many reasons. The first and probably the principal reason is that wounded men in France do not care to show their injuries and by every means possible attempt to hide any mutilation. The art of making artificial limbs in France having reached such a degree of perfection, it is often easy for a man to conceal from a casual observer that he wears an artificial leg or arm supplied him free of charge by the government.

Another reason is that men maimed in the war after having passed through a school of re-education have found employment in country districts and have preferred a country life to that in Paris, where the difficulty of moving around crowded streets is only increased by that of having to often mount high flights of stairs. In all there are about 150,000 mutilated ex-soldiers in Paris, many of them today employed in ministries and government offices, while some, about 10 per cent of the Paris total, are cared for in homes supervised by the Office National des Mutiles. Those who do move around in Paris are rarely to be seen in fashionable districts visited by Americans. Their limited means oblige them to seek shelter in outlying districts where foreigners are practically never taken on sightseeing trips.

The Shell Shocked.

Those in homes where they pay a small fee for the care and assistance given them are mostly fellows suffering from commotion or shell shock and who in many cases have become mentally deranged, several having been struck dumb by bursting shells.

There are 2,500 blind ex-soldiers in France, spread all over the country. Those who had means before they joined the French army have retired with their families and relatives into the country, while many of those obliged to work in order to keep themselves and those around them have found employment in homes and clubs where they are taught the art of making various articles which are sold by the homes for the benefit of the blind worker. Like their comrades who have lost limbs in the World war, the blind do not care to have any one notice their terrible loss and as much as possible refuse to congregate in public places.

The schools for the re-education of the blind in France teach the manufacture of brushes and chairs, how to read and write Braille, typewriting, printing, piano tuning and even commercial classes for the more intellectual.

Every government office reserves a certain number of occupations for the mutilated and a bill is at present before parliament which tends to make it obligatory for all commercial concerns to employ mutilated soldiers to the extent of 1 per cent of their staff.

On no account whatever does the government allow mutilated soldiers to beg in the streets and so-called war heroes selling shoe laces or flowers in the streets are but impostors.

Pescarra Helicopter Really Flies

Had Merry Life Under Pharaohs

Ancient Egyptian People Cared Nothing for Tomorrow and Were Devoted to Pleasure.

Some one has said that Egypt of the Pharaohs was "a nation of undertakers." Mummies and their cerements, tombs and valleys of the dead, the pyramids that were but colossal mausoleums, the "lone and level sands" that cover some necropolis of a prehistoric era, the mortuary paraphernalia and inscriptions, all such things so dear to the hearts of the archaeologists lend a funereal color to modern conceptions of the ancient Egyptian life. Yet, while it has been through Egypt's tombs that we have been able to penetrate the mysteries of its civilization, life in the days of the Pharaohs and the valley of the Nile, as it has been reconstructed from papyrean manuscripts and from the voluminous hieratic and hieroglyphic inscriptions, was far removed from the sad and lugubrious aspects suggested by the ruins and the ornate system of sepulture unearthed by the modern delvers in Egypt's sands. The philosophy of the Egyptians in the days of the Pharaohs was one that would have warmed the heart of old Omar, impregnated as it was with the doctrine that "the pursuit of happiness" is the chief purpose of life, according to Arthur Weigall, whose latest book, "The Glory of the Pharaohs," glitters like a star bomb above the gloomy trenches of the Egyptologists, revealing in unwonted colors the life that was lived by the sons and daughters of old Nile thirty or forty centuries ago, says the Kansas City Star. Mr. Weigall, it may be mentioned, is dealing with a subject upon which he is an authority. He was for many years inspector general of antiquities for Upper Egypt, was present at or participated in most of the great discoveries made in the Valley of the Tombs of Kings, and is recognized as a scholar deeply versed in Egyptian archaeology and history. But he is not one of the dry-as-dust archaeologists, steeped in technique and terminology. He has a different view of the province of the archaeologist.

"An archaeologist," Mr. Weigall explains, "must be a historian. He must conjure up the past; he must play the Witch of Endor. His lists and his indices, his catalogues and notebooks, must be the spells which he uses to invoke the dead. The spells have no potency until they are pronounced; the lists of kings of Egypt have no more than an accidental value until they call before the curtain of the mind those monarchs themselves. It is the business of the archaeologist to wake the dreaming dead, not to send the living to sleep." And so, following this conception of the duty of the archaeologist, he has made Egypt live for us again in such fascinating books as "The Life and Times of Akhanton" and the "Glory of the Pharaohs," wherein, with wonderful insight and sympathy, he has introduced the modern world to the poetry, the philosophy and the "joy of life" that was Egypt's in the flower of its civilization.

Spirit of Egypt Unchanged.

The spirit of Egypt is unchanged, he tells us. Though the heyday of its glory has departed, the Egypt of the pharaohs still lives in the hearts of the children of the Nile today—"yesterday this day's madness did prepare," and the past is alive today and all the deeds of man in all the ages are living at this hour in offspring. If you would put yourself in touch with the continuity of past and present "come with me," he says, "to a Theban garden that I know, where, on some still evening, the dark palms are reflected in the placid Nile and the acacias are mellowed by the last light of the sunset; where, in leafy bowers, the grapes cluster overhead and the fig tree is burdened with fruit. Beyond the broad sheet of the river rise those unchanging hills which encompass the Valley of the Tombs of Kings, and at their foot, dimly seen in the evening haze, sit the twin colossi as they have sat since the days of Amenophis the Magnificent. The owls hoot to one another through the garden, and at the edge of the alabaster tank wherein the dusk is mirrored a frog croaks unseen among the lilies. Even so he croaked on this very ground in those days when, typifying eternity, he seemed to utter the endless refrain, 'I am the resurrection, I am the resurrection,' into the ears of men and maidens beneath the selfsame stars."

The ways of the men and women of the days of Akhanton and Amenophis were no different from the ways of the Nile. And in the days of old Rameses there was jazz.

"Eat, Drink and Be Merry."

Tomb building was only one of the by-industries of the ancient nation—an outlet for the megalomania of its rulers and nobles. The teeming millions evidently devoted but little time to the contemplation of the world beyond. The keynote of their philosophy was "eat, drink and be merry," and let the next world take care of itself. Throughout the social life, as revealed in the deciphered tales, poems, songs and festival records of the tomb walls and the voluminous papyri, runs the recurrent trinity of wine, women and song. The slave who helped with the pyramidal stones, the fellahs who plowed and tilled the fields, the shepherds who guarded the flocks, the boatmen who painfully plied their oars on the Nile, all, it seems, sang at their tasks. Some of their songs have been preserved. It was a gay nation—that ancient Egypt. If it were possible to revive one of its mummified maidens today and let her awaken to the sound of a saxophone orchestra in some modern jazz palace, she would, by all accounts, be entirely at home and go dancing across the floor as one but refreshed from a night's sleep. Such was the life revealed in the cold stones and dry parchments unearthed from the tombs of today. This way of looking at life, says our author, is to be found in Egypt from the earliest times down to the period of the Greek occupation and, in fact, to the present day. It was a philosophy inborn in the Egyptian—a part of his nature.

Philosophy of Imhotep.

Away back in the third dynasty, about 3000 B. C., there was a famous philosopher named Imhotep and the inscriptions reveal that the philosophy he taught his disciples ran in this fashion: "Behold the dwellings of the dead. Their walls fall down, their place is no more, they are as they had never existed," and he drew from this the lesson that man is soon done with and forgotten and that therefore his life should be as happy here as possible. "Be merry while ye may," he told them. There is a poem dating from about 2000 B. C., from which the following exhortation is taken:

"Walk after thy heart's desire so long as thou livest. Put myrrh on thy head, clothe thyself in fine linen, anoint thyself with the true marvels of God. Let not thy heart concern itself, until there cometh to thee that great day of lamentation. Yet he who is at rest can hear not thy complaint, and he who lies in the tomb can understand not thy weeping. Therefore, with smiling face, let thy days be happy and rest not thereon. For no man carrieth his goods away with him, and no man returneth who is gone thither."

A similar refrain was found in the tomb of Neferhotep, a priest of Amon, of about 1350 B. C.:

"Come, songs and music are before thee. Set behind thee all cares; think only upon gladness, until that day cometh wherein thou shalt go down to the place which loveth silence."

Love Songs of the Pharaohs.

Beautiful love songs have been preserved from destruction that throw much light on the Egyptian temperament—songs supposed to have been sung by the peasant class. Here is one that appears beneath the figure of a maiden wearing a wreath of flowers:

"I am thy first sister, and to me thou art as a garden which I have planted with flowers and all sweet smelling herbs. And I have directed a canal into it, that thou mightest dip thy hand into it when the north wind blows cool. The place is beautiful where we walk, because we walk together, thy hand resting in mine, and our mind thoughtful and our heart joyful. It is intoxicating to me to hear thy voice, yet my life depends upon hearing it. Whenever I see thee it is better for me than food or drink." Here is another song by one who had no thought of tombs or mummies: "The breath of my nostrils alone is that which maketh my heart to live; I found thee; God grant thee to me, forever and ever." Fancy, says this poetic archeologist, "words such as these having fallen from the lips of what is now a resin-smelling lump of bones and hardened flesh, perhaps still unearthed, perhaps lying in some museum show case, or perhaps kicked about in fragments over the hot sands of some tourist-ridden necropolis." Looking back in the light of the unearthed historical muniments of this ancient land, our interpreter visions this singer, abroad in the early morning "like the Shulamite of King Solomon's day," her hair moving in the breeze "as a flock of goats that appear from Mount Gilead," her teeth white "as the shorn sheep which come up from the washing," and her lips "like a thread of scarlet," singing of her heart's delight "where the wild ducks cry to each other as they scuttle through the tall reeds."

The Egyptians loved the great outdoors—the gardens, the leafy places. They spooned in the great parks which were laid out by the Pharaohs, planted with rare shrubbery and flowers from distant lands. They danced and sang in the festivals that were held in the season when the flowers were in full bloom and the light-hearted lovers made the flowers and the trees vocal with the delight of life. In one of their songs a fig tree is made to call to a passing maiden to come into its shade:

"Come," it says, "and spend the festal day and tomorrow and the day after tomorrow, sitting in my shadow. Let thy lover sit at thy side and let him drink. Thy servants will come with the dinner things—they will drink of every kind, with all manner of cakes, flowers of yesterday and of today and all kinds of refreshing fruit."

From many an inscription breathes this pervasive "joy of life." The very names which the Egyptians gave their children are redolent of gayety—"Eyes-of-Love," "My-Lady-Is-as-Gold," "Cool-Breeze," "Gold-and-Lapis-Lazuli," "Beautiful Morning." Their vases and toilet articles and furniture and all objects of daily use tell of a people who believed the world was made to be happy in. "There is no reflection," says our author, "of the underworld to be looked for in the ornamental bronze mirrors, nor smell of death in their frail perfume pots. Religious abstraction is not to be sought in lotus-formed drinking cups, and mortification of the body is certainly not practiced on golden chairs and soft cushions. And these were objects found buried even in the tombs of their priests and religious teachers."

Joy Was Unconfined.

The intense craving of the Egyptian for brightness and cheerfulness is the real voice that comes from Egyptian tombs. They were passionately fond of ceremonial display. Their huge temples, painted with the most brilliant colors, formed the setting of processions and ceremonies in which music, rhythmic motion and color blended. In honor of the gods dances were conducted, while celebrations, such as the fantastic feast of lamps, were held on the anniversaries of religious events. In these gorgeously spectacular ceremonies there was no place for anything somber or austere, nor could they have been conceived by any but the most life-loving temperaments. . . .

At all times the Egyptians bedecked themselves with flowers and rich and poor alike breathed what they called "the sweet north wind" through a screen of blossoms. At their feasts and festivals each guest was presented with necklaces and crowns of lotus flowers and a specially selected bouquet was carried in their hands. Constantly as the hours passed, fresh flowers were brought to them, and the guests are shown in the tomb paintings in the act of burying their faces in the delicate petals with an air of luxury which even the conventionalities of the draughtsman cannot hide. The common people arrayed themselves with wreaths of lotuses at all galas and carnivals. The feast rooms were elaborately decorated with flowers—garlands twined themselves about the tables and around the jars of wine. Keen was their delight in music. The strings and the pipe, the lute and the harp, made music at every festival—religious, national and private. The words for "rejoice" and "dance" were synonymous in the literature of the Egyptians. At all banquets dancing was as indispensable as wine, women and song. One sees representations of girls, their heads thrown back and their long hair flying, merrily twanging a guitar as they skip across the dancing floor. In the civil and religious processions many of the participators danced along as though from sheer lightness of heart, and on some occasions even the band footed it down the high road, circling, jumping and skipping as they played.

Hathor and Bast were their great goddesses of pleasure. They were the patrons of sports and dancing, joy and pleasure, beauty and love and the happy temperament of the Egyptians was evidenced in the high esteem in which these goddesses were held. The annual festival of Bast took place at Bubastis and it was an occasion of the greatest merriment and frivolity. Old Nile was then a watery highway for the Egyptian "joy riders." Herodotus has described the festival scenes in these words:

"This is the nature of the ceremony on the way to Bubastis. They go by water and numerous boats are crowded with persons of both sexes. During the voyage several women strike the cymbals, some men play the flute, the rest singing and clapping their hands. As they pass a town they bring the boat close to the bank. Some of the women continue to sing and play the cymbals; others cry out as long as they can and utter mocking jests against the people of the town, who also begin to dance. This is repeated at every town they pass on the river, and on the occasion of this festival a greater consumption of wine takes place than during the whole of the year."

FORCED TO GIVE BLOOD FOR WIFE

Razor Wielder Is Held by Police While Doctors Perform Transfusion Operation.

MOONSHINE IS CAUSE

Chicago.—With the fumes of moonshine slowly dissipating from his aching head, Theodore Marfy, fifty-five years old, who had cut his wife's throat and, half an hour later, been forced to give his blood to save her life, sat, sober and repentant in his cell at West Chicago avenue station.

"It's the booze that did it," he kept on muttering. "If I'd have known what I was doing I'd never have touched her. Why did I do it?" And every now and then he would raise his head from his hands and beseech his jailers to tell him some way in which he could make amends.

Hope She'll Recover.

Meanwhile in St. Mary's hospital, Mrs. Martha Marfy, her throat swathed in bandages, began to show signs of recovery which it is hoped will be complete.

"The transfusion saved her," it was said. "As long as no infection sets in, there is no reason why she should not recover."

Mrs. Marfy, tired of her husband's continual drunkenness and constant abuse, had left his house and gone to live with her son, Andrew. There she took in washing while Andrew earned his living as a shoe repairer.

On Saturday night Marfy came around, inflamed with moonshine, it is said, and began one of his customary tirades. In the middle of his complaints, he suddenly drew a razor and, before his son could intervene, had drawn it across his wife's throat. Then he fled.

Marfy Raved and Swore.

Rushes Her to Hospital.

Andrew rushed his mother to St. Mary's hospital. The doctors examined her and declined to answer for her life unless an immediate blood transfusion were possible. At that moment Marfy, who had been picked up on the street when his blood-stained clothing was noticed, arrived in charge of detectives, anxious for identification.

The detectives heard the verdict of the doctors. "Here's the man," was the reply, and they held Marfy forward. He fought and protested, but after a quick conference, he was hustled down the corridor and into the operating room. A moment later he was stretched alongside his wife, his arm bared and ready for the operation.

Marfy raved and swore. But they were too many for him. A pint and a half of his blood passed from him to his wife, the vein was sewed up and he was taken away in a patrol wagon.

Now the law, having saved him against his will from the charge of murder, holds him on charges of assault with intent to kill.

THING OF MOST IMPORTANCE

Idle to Think Woman Would Look at Her Teeth When Her Hair Was in Consideration.

The dentist was busy filling a young woman's teeth. When he had finished the first tooth he handed her a mirror that she might see the result for herself. Then he continued his task, each time handing her the mirror after a tooth had been filled. Finally, when his task was completed and she had handed back the mirror with thanks, he asked:

"Well, Mrs. Danforth, how do they look to you?"

"Look to me? Why, I haven't seen them yet!" she exclaimed.

"I mean the teeth I have just filled," said the dentist, thinking she had not understood.

"Oh, I forgot about the teeth," she replied as she reached for the mirror.

"What did you look at each time, then?" queried the dentist, wonderingly.

"Why, my hair of course."—Harper's Magazine.

Reward Finest Building.

Old London is setting an example to the world in striving for beauty. The Royal Institute of British Architects has ganted a bronze medal every year for the finest street frontage built within four miles of Charing Cross. It was won this year by W. Curtis Green, for Wolsely house, Piccadilly. More than a score of fine buildings were considered by the jury: Earl Crawford, Sir Aston Webb, Paul Waterhouse, Sir Reginald Blomfield and F. Guy Dawber. The quality looked for was not commercial but aesthetic and architectural. Liverpool and Manchester already have schemes for rewarding their beautifiers.—London Mail.

Everybody Knows How.

"Have you ever noticed?" asks the Maryville (Mo.) Democrat-Forum, "how everybody knows how everybody else should do something?"

Bedbug and Mosquito.

"In the matter of birth and breeding the bedbug is distinctly superior to the mosquito, which frequently springs from the most malodorous and disgustful surroundings," says Samuel Hopkins Adams, in Hygeia. Yet the mosquito is just as poisonous and far more dangerous. Socially considered the bedbug is an outcast; some day "when civilization is a little more advanced" possibly the "National Association of Artificial Peanut Shell Manufacturers" will refuse to accept the invitation of "the guilt-stricken chamber of commerce of Booster City" because "several of our members having occasion to visit your locality in the past year have been bitten by mosquitoes."

WHY TAKE LAXATIVES?

Discovery by Science Has Replaced Them.

Pills and salts give temporary relief from constipation only at the expense of permanent injury, says an eminent medical authority.

Science has found a newer, better way—a means as simple as Nature itself.

In perfect health a natural lubricant keeps the food waste soft and moving. But when constipation exists this natural lubricant is not sufficient. Doctors prescribe Nujol because it acts like this natural lubricant and thus secures regular bowel movements by Nature's own method—lubrication.

As Nujol is not a medicine or laxative, it cannot gripe and, like pure water, it is harmless and pleasant.

Nujol is used in leading hospitals. Get a bottle from your druggist today.—Advertisement.

Much Talcum Powder Used.

If the tins, each measuring four inches in length, necessary to hold the 10,000 tons of talcum powder used by women in America last year were placed end to end, they would extend 2,147 miles, or from New York to Santa Fe, N. M.

Too Expensive.

"Does your wife object to your smoking?" "Yes; she says we can't both afford to do it."

Some people are vain because of their many defects.

Personal Hygiene

EVERY well-informed physician is opposed to the use of poisonous, burning and irritating solutions for personal hygiene. This is an indisputable fact.

Zonite may be used frequently at great germicidal strength on sensitive membrane and tissues without the slightest danger or harmful effect.

Zonite is non-poisonous and non-irritating. It has greater germ killing power than pure carbolic acid and has more than seventy-five times the germ killing power of peroxide.
